

Mapping the Bargaining Landscape

In the months leading up to the Nov. 1 amendable date, several Class I rail carriers and their union partners reached—and in many cases, ratified—local collective bargaining agreements to proactively resolve the 2025 bargaining round. Dozens of these local five-year agreements are now in place, with consistent terms covering thousands of freight rail employees across specific crafts at individual railroads and establishing a pattern for national bargaining.

The chart below depicts the current bargaining landscape among the NCCC carriers. It is important to note that other carriers that participate in national bargaining but are not members of the NCCC have also reached agreements based on the pattern.
